PRE-SUMMER SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Fake "Rockefeller" Here Last Summer Is Arrested At Resort In Canada

By Dan Rattiner

Well, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police got their man. He is Christopher Rocancourt, an international bon vivant and swindler who spent most of last July living the high life in the Hamptons, then absconded with about $200,000 of other people's money. They found him last Monday in the Canadian ski resort — they still have snow up there — of Whistler, not far from Vancouver, doing his usual business, which was trying to hustle a Whistler businesswoman out of $5,000.

"She thought there was something odd about the deal he was presenting," said Corporal Grant Learned of the Canadian Mounted Police, "and so she called us in. We quickly recognized that he was the same man wanted in East Hampton and in Los Angeles among other places. And so we have arrested him. We anticipate further charges will be laid. We do have what we would call bona fide victims."

The Mounties arrested Rocancourt at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel and Marine Resort, one of the most luxurious hotels in the area. They also arrested his wife, Pia Reyes, who is a former Playboy Playmate, and they put their four year old son Zeus in child protective services. The following day, after denying Rocancourt bail, they granted bail to Ms. Reyes and allowed her to be reunited with Zeus.

Whether Rocancourt will ever be brought back to justice in East Hampton is not clear. He is ones he used everywhere else, and which had gotten him into the Mill Garth. He arrived with his wife, a girl friend, Zeus and an obsequious chauffeur-butler who went with him everywhere, two steps behind, taking notes, using the cell phone. Of course the Mill Garth would give him credit. His butler presented his card, which said he was Christopher Rockefeller, yes those Rockefellers, and he was an heir to the fortune.

The unfortunate thing in East Hampton was how they arrested him and then let him go. He was taken in on a misdemeanor — not paying his $11,000 bill at Pink House and an $8,000 bill at the Mill Garth — while the more serious charges against him, swindling, fraud, ponzi schemes and so forth were being drawn up, and then nobody told the judge.

Rocancourt appeared before the judge, pleaded not guilty to the misdemeanor, and then was released on $500 bail, an amount he easily paid considering that his total haul was more than $200,000 and none of it had yet been returned. Then he jumped bail, and from August until this past Sunday, had not been seen again.

Rocancourt's con was pretty standard stuff. He also wanted, and requests for extradition have already been filed, from Switzerland, New York, Virginia, France and Los Angeles as well as from East Hampton.

Rocancourt, who is only 33 years old, seems to have a problem with pretending that he is somebody else. He arrived here in East Hampton last June, got himself and his entourage put up at the Pink House in East Hampton and Mill Garth Inn in Amagansett (he never paid them), and then proceeded to make the rounds.

The rounds he went on were pretty much the Newsanchor Peter Jennings and his wife Kayce, residents of Bridgehampton, celebrated the 80th birthday of Kayce's mother at Nobu in Manhattan last Thursday.

Well, finally a member of the Baldwin family is moving into the farmhouse at Stony Hill farm which they bought half a dozen years ago in Amagansett. Had you known that, even though President Clinton and his wife were guests there, the Alec Baldwins had never really moved in? They lived instead in a small house in Wainscott while the farmhouse was undergoing a forever remodeling on instructions from wife Kim. But now with Alec Baldwin and Kim Basinger split up and Kim moved out to points west, Alec is moving into the farmhouse and we wish him all the best.

Hamptonites Joan Ganz Cooney and Pete Peterson hosted a dinner for former Senator Bob Kerrey last week at Le Cirque. Among the Hamptonites attending were Don Hewitt, Walter Isaacson, Peter Jennings, Ed Koch (our movie reviewer), Mort Zuckerman and many others.

Among the many people lucky enough to attend the historic opening of the Broadway show "The Producers" were Hamptonites Paul Simon of Montauk, Sarah Jessica Parker, Alec Baldwin and of course the genius himself, Mel Brooks, who has recently moved from Quogue to Water Mill.

Here's what our latest patients are saying....

• When I first went to see you about having my eyes done, I told you my greatest desire was to be able to enjoy theatre again by seeing the faces of people on stage. This week I have been to two events, less than two weeks after my surgery, and that wish has been granted.....

Robert Barandes
Attorney at Law

• I must admit that I was somewhat apprehensive about the final outcome of the surgery, I am very glad I had it done. Now I realize with great happiness that this was the right choice for me. The old fear of losing my eyesight or having complications because of it, seem very laughable now.

As a patient and psychologist I want you to know that your professionalism, reassurance and caring before, during and after the surgery are greatly appreciated. Besides being a physician you are a true gentleman. You can be sure that I will recommend you enthusiastically to anyone who talks to me about LASIK surgery.

Dr. Marie A. Carrese
Counseling Psychology

• You couldn't get the smile off my face, waking up and able to see without the aid of glasses or contacts. I was very pleased with Dr. Ricci and his staff for making one feel at ease and being so confident going through the procedure

We're two moves ahead of the other guys.

Moving you is as much mental as physical. That's why Despatch Moving & Storage is in a class of its own.

We ask the tough questions. We find out if you have any special requests. Or special needs.

We're constantly monitoring the weather forecasts. Checking out road conditions ahead of time.

Making sure our equipment and trucks are in first-rate condition.

You see, the more we prepare for your move, the smoother the move.

Not everybody takes this kind of time for their clients. But we feel it's necessary.

After all, it's your move.

Because you don't want just anybody touching your stuff.™

had insider information about a stock that was about to go up. He could see that you were really a nice person, he certainly was a nice person, and if you gave him $5,000 or $10,000, he would count you in. Your investment would double within three months.

A variation on this con was to find someone who wanted very much to borrow money but had pretty much used up his credit. Astonishingly, after befriending Rocancourt (Rockefeller), Rocancourt offered that his family trust back in Switzerland would lend him, on Rocancourt's word, $100,000 at almost negligible interest rates. But that was because he had become friends.

"I just need to show the lawyers, say $20,000 in up front money to show them it is a viable loan. Then you get the $100,000."

Among those in the Hamptons Rocancourt took money from were a nurse, an overextended stockbroker and a summer visitor. He also tried to swindle a well known and well liked Southampton painter and gallery owner, Gines Serran-Pagan. But Serran-Pagan sensed he was a phony.

Serran-Pagan himself is quite a story here in the Hamptons. He came from northern Italy with his young son two years ago, bought a three acre parcel that was originally built as a farm, but was now a defunct construction company headquarters, and converted it back to a farm, with goats, geese, rabbits and chickens running all around. He then opened the barns, repainted them, and made them into art studios to hang the shows of his friends. He called the place the Red Barn Atelier Gallery. He also had dinner parties (he's an excellent cook), held fundraisers and, when approached by Rocancourt and his entourage, decided to invite him to dinner with the idea of setting him up to deliver a con, but then turning the tables and conning the con artist.

Many people were in on it. One pretended to be a Sony Vice President, another pretended to be an art curator. Apparently Rocancourt sensed something was up, however, and almost immediately after dinner, told his driver they had to go before getting the con going either one way or another. Then, one of the dinner guests followed Rockefeller home, not to Lily Pond Lane where he said he had a house, but to the little Mill Garth Inn. The police were called. And Rocancourt was arrested on the small misdemeanor charge, and then he jumped bail when no further charges had been yet placed the following morning.

Rocancourt's lawyer here in the Hamptons at that time — this was on August 3 — was the well known attorney Bruce Cutler, who has for many years represented the John Gotti mafia family. Cutler apparently insisted on getting paid in advance for the appearance in court and was in the belief that he would be paid more when the case came to trial.

"People I represent don't jump bail," he told reporters after Rocancourt did exactly that. "If he does he certainly knows the legal consequences."

Maybe.

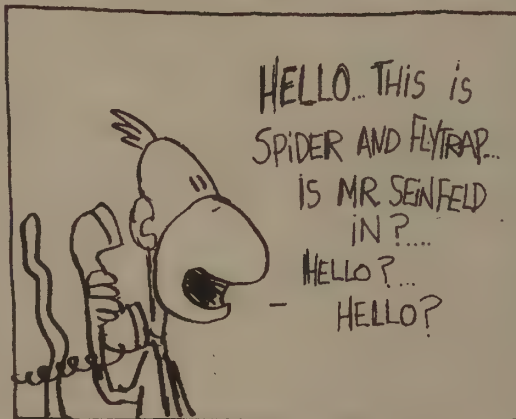

Gines Serran-Pagan is currently showing "Forever Artists," a gallery exhibition of Long Island artists age 70 to 100. The opening cocktail party was Saturday, the day after the arrest.

A Perk

Want A Sex Change? Work For The City On The Bay And They Will Pay For It

By Dan Rattiner

Now here's an idea whose time has come. The City of San Francisco is now offering sex change operations free of charge to city employees. Well, not exactly. The employee still has to pay the first $100 of what is a $50,000 operation no matter how you cut it, and if there are prescriptions to be bought, the first $10.

That the city would do this as a medical benefit kind of boggles the mind. But then San Franciscans think of themselves as kind of trendy and with-it and hey, if you can get your appendix out or your eye glass prescription changed, why not your gender changed? Presumably people will rush in from all over and apply for a job because of this "perk." Why not?

There's a councilman (not councilwoman at this time), Marcus Arana, who explained it all.

"We have insurance that will pay for a hysterectomy in Mary but not for Marcus, and we pay for hormone therapy in Mary but not for Marcus."

Marcus heads up the transgender discrimination division of the San Francisco Human Rights Commission. He speaks for fourteen of the City's 37,000 workers who have checked off the little box marked transgender on their job form paperwork.

I am not making this up.

Incidentally, did you notice that when explaining this law, he explains it from a strictly MALE perspective? The women get hysterectomy money.

We don't. The women get hormone therapy money. We don't. The way I see it, Marcus — who if you also notice refers to himself during this explanation — has been brainwashed by really dumb men on the council. Think about it. The transgender types who are looking at this from an anti-discrimination point of view have noted that there are more men our sex."

"Duh, okay."

Something lost in the shuffle here is that women live so much longer than men. About 10% longer. The husbands of the women who are dying today typically died in 1992, two years earlier because they tend to marry women two years younger and eight years earlier because they are men. President Clinton had just been elected and hadn't met Monica yet. Frank Sinatra and Joe DiMaggio were doing just fine, thank you. Mike Tyson hadn't yet bitten off Evander Holyfield's ear. The Russians and Americans hadn't yet done a joint mission to space. And nobody had yet heard of Puffy Combs. This is a hell of an unfair thing for women to get to enjoy before they die that we men don't.

Well, move to San Francisco. Are you a man who's just turned 70? Get a civil service job there. Then go for the free sex change, and instead of dying at 73, you'll get to live to 79. That's a 300% increase in your life expectancy.

(Or in reverse, maybe this is a way for an old lady to commit suicide.)

Maybe they'll get real good at doing sex changes in San Francisco. Like — you'll be driving along in that city and get pulled over by a cop. He get's your licence and registration, then walks back to the police car to check it out but when he returns, he's a woman.

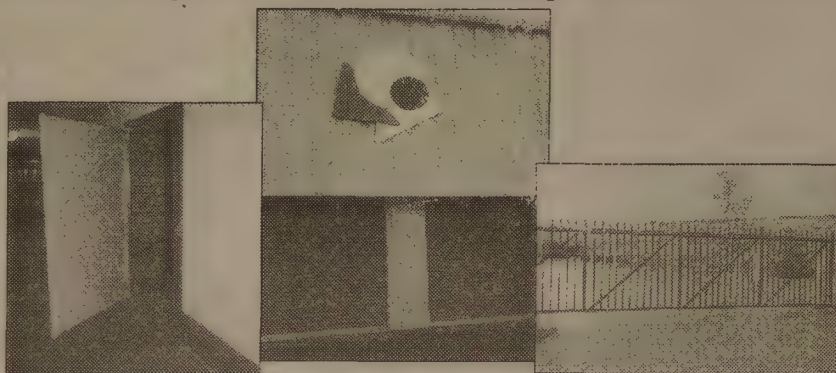

"What do we have to do, change our sex to get an equal amount of money? Okay, so we'll change our sex."

on the city council then women and so it will be necessary to get some men to switch their votes — sorry about that — from no to yes — to get this thing to pass.

Here's what the lobbyists they hire are saying in the cloakrooms behind the scenes before the vote.

"You really want the WOMEN to get all this money instead of us men? Haven't we men been beat up enough? The women get hysterectomy money. The women get hormone therapy money. What do we have to do, change our sex to get an equal amount of money? Okay, so we'll change

May Days

Plan Your Calendar For The Book Fair, The Antique Car Fair And The Potatohampton

By Dan Rattiner

May in the Hamptons tends to be a month of frantic hammering and banging. New swimming pools and tennis courts are going in, new roofs are going on, trees are being planted and the cleanup crews are out there. If the Hamptons scene were to be compared to a Broadway show, this would be the time that the final sets would be banged together, the last run-throughs would be run-through and the advertising would be sent out to all the media.

Come to the Hamptons. Opening Day: May 26.

And so it will run, the summer season that is the engine of the year-around economy, finally petering out after Labor Day and the mid-October Film Festival.

How it begins, however, is another matter. Here are my favorite May events, among the fifty or so that occur this month.

Arguably the "real" first event of the season – there are several of them that consider themselves the first of the season, notably one that this newspaper runs – is the John Steinbeck Book Fair at the Elaine Benson Gallery in Bridgehampton.

Overseen by Kimberley Goff, who is the late Elaine Benson's daughter, it takes place on Saturday afternoon May 11 and consists of about 150 writers, many of them quite famous, who live in the Hamptons and have gotten their books published during the past year. They sit at banquet tables under a tent with stacks of their new book in front of them. Those attending buy the books at retail directly from the authors, get them dedicated and autographed, then pay on their way out, with proceeds benefitting the John Steinbeck Reading Room at Southampton College. Agents and year when they tallied up the student's preferences, the winner was Kermit the Frog. And so they invited him. And so he spoke.

"This is a very important milestone in your life," he croaked. Or somebody behind him croaked. Among the 2,000 spectators, you could have heard a pin drop.

Last year, rock star Billy Joel gave the commencement address and by all accounts it was one of the most moving affairs in the history of this 40 year old college. This year, on May 20 at 2 p.m., historian Thich Nhat Hanh, an exiled Vietnamese Buddhist monk, will speak. Tickets to the commencement are hard to get – it is supposed to be fans mill about, there are paparazzi and TV cameras, wine and cheese, and the proceedings are halted about midway through the afternoon so that the chancellor of the college, Robert F.X. Sillerman, can make a speech thanking everyone for coming, then present an award to an author who is being honored at the event. This year the honoree is Kenneth Koch.

Someday I will tell you about the time that the race started... all by itself while the management was still looking for the starting gun...

The second interesting event of May is the graduation ceremony at Southampton College on May 20. You wouldn't think of this as a "summer" event in the scheme of things, but then, it depends what year this is and what they have planned. One limited to the immediate family of those graduating – but if you really want to go like I do, you figure out a way. Rent a Kid, for example.

The third and fourth big events of May are a classic car auction and a concours d'elegance, both in Bridgehampton. The classic car auction is presented by Kensington Motor Group at Sayre Park on Snake Hollow Road on Saturday, May 26, with a bidders' Cocktail Reception on Friday, May 25. On Sunday, May 27, there is the Hamptons Concours d'Elegance, a parade of old cars, held at Sayre Park, hosted by Honorary Chairs Christie

Brinkley and Peter Cook. The Concours benefits the American Cancer Society, which will serve a gala luncheon against the backdrop of elegant motor cars, some dating back to the early decades of the last century. After the Concours awards ceremony, a cutting-edge fashion show will be represented by society couturier Jimmy's, with each model arriving at the catwalk in a Concours car.

Last year's Concours d'Elegance was hosted by Jerry Seinfeld, who himself has a collection of twelve antique Porsches. Since that time, he has examined the Porsches, which he had moved out here to his new home in East Hampton just a month before, determined that they were starting to rust out because of their proximity to the salt water ocean, and so subsequently shipped them back further inland to protect his investment.

Finally, there are two events at the end of May that this newspaper is running.

One of them is that same Saturday night May 26 when from 7 to 9 Dan's Papers, along with London Jewelers, will hold the premiere party for the new Dan's Papers glossy magazine South of the Highway. This takes place at London Jewelers, 1 Main Street, East Hampton, there will be a runway show by Betsey Johnson, an open bar, a special drink prepared by Cointreau to celebrate the opening and all proceeds will benefit the Child Development Center. The party will also celebrate the 75th anniversary of the founding of London Jewelers, and there will be a big birthday cake, with candles blown out by owners Mark and Candy Udell.

Sunday morning at 9:30 am, there is the second Dan's Papers event in May, which is the running of the annual Dan's Papers 10k Potatompton Minithon race through the farm fields (and summer mansions) of Sagaponack.

The event is now in its 23rd year, is sponsored by Self Magazine, and is one of the oldest running races in the New York Metropolitan area. Certainly it is the oldest – read first – running race on eastern Long Island.

At the time it was founded, in 1978, the Long Island Marathon had not yet been started and the New York City Marathon was only three years old, attracting just a few hundred runners.

What did we know? Some people said they would like to run. We provided them a course that crossed the railroad tracks in two places (rule one: stop if a train is coming), crossed the Montauk Highway (rule two: wait 'til the officer says it is safe to cross), featured no water stops, no timer, no beneficiaries and no sponsors. Also, because the route was never measured for accuracy, it really wasn't a 10k at all, but more like a 9.834k. Six hundred people attended.

Some day I will tell you about the time that the race started – there were about 800 runners – all by itself while the management was still looking for the starting gun to give to the celebrity who was supposed to fire it.

Another day I will tell you about the time that, with timers and water stops in place, sponsors and beneficiaries selected, no railroad tracks or highway to cross and everything else worked out, I drove the lead car of the event and after a mile got lost, taking more than a thousand runners down roads they never intended to run.

That year it was an 11.3k.

Anyway, under the good offices of event planner Linda Shapiro, Self Magazine and the race crew, last year's Dan's Papers Potatompton Minithon was a model of correctness. And so will this year's race be too.

Maybe.

The Talk Of Mars

Here Come The Earthlings. Hope They Don't Foul It Up Again This Time

By Dan Rattiner

Ever been down to Puerto Rico? High up in the mountains there they've got this whole array of satellite dishes and sound monitoring devices that scan the skies, listening for something, anything, that creatures from outer space might have to say. So far — nothing.

Is it possible that nobody is out there? They're not giving up. Two years ago, NASA sent a rocket to Mars with a microphone attached to it that they intended to land there. The microphone cost $100,000 to build, was a highly sensitive device, and, presumably, after landing and deploying, would pick up any sounds that a Martian might like to make, natural or otherwise. Here on Earth, we'd press PLAY and bingo! we'd hear creatures from outer space.

What happened, though, is that the rocket entered the Martian atmosphere, got to within a few hundred feet of the surface, started to back down and then went dead. Nothing has been heard from it since.

Now they are going to try again. Only this time, the attempt will be made by the French. Sometime in the next two months, a rocket ship called the NetLander will be fired off from the French Space Center on the Island of Tahiti in the Pacific, again bound for Mars. On board will be another microphone, of the same design as the one sent off in 1999, and once again the rocket will settle down on Mars in the hopes of getting something to speak to us.

Frankly, this time, I think we might actually hear something. In 1999, it is my belief, the rocket ship dropped down, and the microphone swung out on its cord and probably went through the window of some alien's home on that planet.

"What the..."

How would you feel if a microphone, dangling on a cord, suddenly smashed through one of your windows? Your first instinct, I think, would be to from a cord in the sky, don't be afraid of it, talk into it. Say something.

"Start spreading the news. Da da da da da. If you can make it here you'll make it anywhere, it's up to you New York, New York."

By the way, I have just read an interview with a man in Arizona who, years ago, had an atomic bomb accidentally dropped into his back yard from an Air Force bomber on a training mission passing overhead. It didn't go off (obviously), but the fuse detonated and the little explosion it made dug a fifty foot diameter crater in the yard.

Walter Gregg, who told authorities about it at the time, was considered crazy by many, but recently released secret Air Force documents revealing that it absolutely happened, in 1958, and the government kept it all hush hush.

"I was in the house at the time," Gregg said. "And I ran out and there was just this curl of smoke rising from this big hole. I was contacted by the Air Force who offered me $500 to fill in the hole, but I figured the only way I could fill in the hole would be to dig another hole nearby and I would just as soon have the hole in the part of the yard where it was so I refused. It's still there."

This was not the only accident over mainland America involving accidentally dropped atomic bombs. According to the documents just released, during a twenty year period, there were 61 accidental atomic bomb dropping occurrences most involving B-52s. Until now, nobody knew.

According to the documents just released, during a twenty year period, there were sixty-one accidental atomic bomb dropping occurrences.

rip it out, throw it to the floor and smash it with your feet. It's the same thing on Mars. Except an alien would smash it with his flippers.

Well, that was December of 1999. Can you imagine how sensational it must have been when this smashed up microphone got brought in to the authorities? They'd look at it and scratch their heads, or scratch what passes for their heads and they'd read where it says MADE IN CHINA on the back of the plastic case and they'd say next time this happens let's tell them a thing or two.

The word would then go out — that Puerto Rican satellite dish was built so long ago with such early technology it probably never was able to pick anything up — that if a microphone drops down

play review: karen

By Jan Silver

A suspense-filled play by Bridgehampton playwright Leonard Berkowitz titled Karen is having its world premiere run now at Miami's Coconut Grove Playhouse. It is an old-fashioned drama in three acts that keeps the audience guessing almost until the end. Although the climax is melodramatic and a little too contrived, the story is engaging.

The set-up is simple. David Ross, an aspiring novelist, leaves London to work as a caretaker/companion for recovering stroke patient John Wyndam in his remote Cornwall house. Karen, Wyndam's attractive but reserved adult daughter, also lives there. David learns that Karen is 33 but looks younger. She had been in a car accident 15 years earlier with her mother, who was killed. John tells David that, despite years of psychological counseling and even shock therapy, Karen has no memory of the past. She is to be treated gently.

The playwright piques audience interest even further by having John declare to David, "Reality and illusion are interchangeable... Life is illogical."

David observes a few unnatural happenings in the Wyndam house but, as he and Karen become attracted to each other, he thinks he can offer

Karen a normal, loving life. Karen is a drama in the spirit of classic mysteries like Laura, Rebecca or even Jane Eyre—there are more family secrets to be discovered.

The play is an interesting puzzle despite the engineered ending. The three veteran actors in this premier production—Christopher Bishop as David, Arland Russell as John, and Maureen Silliman as Karen—are crisp and believable, even when delivering some overheated lines.

Director Barbara Lowery clearly builds up the suspense. Set designer Steve Lambert creates an English manor house in the center of the Playhouse's Encore Room Theatre, a theater-in-the-round. Eric Nelson (lighting), Steve Shapiro (sound) and Heather MacKenzie (stage manager) have filled the set with both warmth and foreboding. Costume designer Ellis Tillman dresses the cast in appropriate country clothing.

Karen continues at the Coconut Grove Playhouse through May 27. The Playhouse opened as a regional theater in 1956 and has staged many premieres including Samuel Beckett's Waiting for Godot with Bert Lahr and Tom Ewell. Currently on its main stage, Frank Gorshin is starring as George Burns in Rupert Holmes' new biographical play Say Goodnight, Gracie (which may be headed for Manhattan).

The Playhouse is located in the very lively Coconut Grove section south of Miami's city center. For tickets and information, call (305) 442-4000 or visit their website at www.cgplayhouse.com.

Former Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu Gives Stirring Speech

By David Szczepankowski

On Friday, April 13, former Prime Minister of Israel, Benjamin Netanyahu, addressed my graduate class at the Columbia Business School. He is a controversial figure, even among his countrymen. Several members of the faculty, as well as a few of my classmates, are Israelis and the response to Netanyahu's appearance ranged from enthusiasm to outright disdain. From 1996 - 1999, while he was Prime Minister, Netanyahu changed Israel's approach to Palestinian peace talks. He took a hard line with the Palestinians, which, some say, undermined the work of the previous Prime Minister, Yitzhak Rabin. Mr. Rabin, who was assassinated in 1995, won the Nobel Prize for Peace along with Palestinian leader Yasir Arafat and former Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, for the negotiating and signing of the Oslo Peace Accords in 1994.

On this day, however, Netanyahu's message was about freedom.

After being introduced to the audience of business school students, Netanyahu posed a question: "How many people here think that, in this global economy, advances in technology will create world peace?" After surveying the raised hands, he replied, "if you don't take anything else away from this lecture, please take this. The most powerful force in the world that promotes peace is freedom. I will try to convince you of this today."

David Szczepankowski was born and raised in Wainscott. He currently works for Morgan Stanley.

Netanyahu gave us a short history lesson about countries and governments who opposed freedom and how the people living under domination were farming family in Northeastern Poland who wanted nothing more than a chance to make their own way in the world. When the winds of World War I were blowing through Eastern Europe, my grandfather was brought to a boat headed for America. He was told to go find a new home. The Russians and Germans would kill thousands of young Polish men, boys really, before the war was over. Even though he couldn't speak the language, Marijan Szczepankowski came to the United States and purchased 70 acres of land in Wainscott. He was 16 years old.

My grandfather's parents survived WWI, but were not so lucky some years later when Poland became a different sort of battleground. My extended family was wiped out completely, except for a fellow who made it to America, found freedom and made a life for himself. Maybe Netanyahu was onto something here.

Netanyahu then explained why he feels freedom promotes peace. He said that people who have been stripped of their freedom don't have anything at stake when their government wants to go to war.

"History shows us that when a nation is poor and its people are desperate, that's when wars start. From the Balkans, to pre-war Germany and to many other points in time, these conditions have bred the worst kind of leadership" he said. "But when not productive. One of the stories he told was about the Communist Russians who gathered their brightest and best mathematicians and scientists in a think tank in Siberia.

He asked, "What do you think the greatest Russian minds produced? Well, I'll tell you. Zero. These were extremely bright people, who if they lived in Silicon Valley in California would be among the movers and shakers of the computer age. But with the oppression under which they lived, they did nothing."

This and other stories reminded me of my grandfather who came to the U.S. in the early 1900s. The stories I heard growing up were about a poor a nation is free and its people are thriving, going to war is not an option these people or government would choose."

At this point, a student raised his hand and asked, "It seems that it isn't the freedom, but the poverty that causes wars. How can you explain that?"

Netanyahu described how, in a free country there is a robust middle class. "This is the key to what I am saying. Many point their finger at the U.S. and say there is a gap between the upper and lower classes. But I say look at an oppressed nation. There is no middle class. In a dictatorship, the upper class is a handful of leaders and the rest of the country is poor: no middle class. Here in the U.S., you have a large middle class that can improve their social status through hard work. No one in an oppressed nation has that opportunity."

These points reminded me of the opportunities that I have had in my life. Where would I be today if I had made different choices or didn't have a choice to make? It seems that, like many farmer's sons, I was expected to take over the farm operation, and I did run my father's Wainscott farm for almost 20 years. Some days I am proud of what I accomplished during that time. Other days, it seems like a waste. Now that I have chosen another career direction, I wonder how many people in this country change their lives as dramatically as I have? I think it is more than most people realize. If I were living in another country, would I have had the same chances to change my life?

I guess it was inevitable, but the lecture turned to the Middle East and Israel's struggle with Palestine. Netanyahu stressed that much of what seems like Israeli bullying is actually a set-up by Mr. Arafat. "Do you know how many Palestinians live under Israeli control? None! There are areas in Israel where Palestinians live and we have no control at all. The problem is that they are poor people and want to take advantage of the wealth of Israel. That is where much of the conflict comes from," he said. "Many Westerners don't see Arafat for what he is. To put him in Western terms, Arafat is Castro. Like Castro, Arafat controls his people by forcing them to live in the past. To get back to my original question, what technological advances do you think Cubans or Palestinians get to enjoy? When a people live in a free, modern world, they can enjoy things like the Internet. But when their government insulates them from these advancements, the people become stagnant. All they know is what used to be. The world passes them by."

At the conclusion of the lecture, Netanyahu's final comment was that he hoped he had convinced us all that freedom is the power behind world peace. There was a short question and answer session and Mr. Netanyahu left to a standing ovation. Even his critics among the faculty and students stood and applauded.

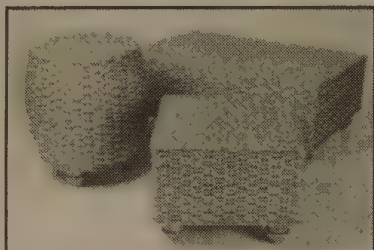

Afterward, I had lunch with two of my classmates, Raghu and Sanjay. Both men are originally from India and we discussed Netanyahu's lecture over slices of pizza. I asked if freedom had any part in their decision to come to the US. Sanjay, who is a top engineer for Lucent Technologies, said that he left India because that nation was in the position that Cuba is in now.

"India is trying to change with the world. There is a lot of opportunity there. There is a lot of poverty, too. It might take decades for India to be able to offer what America can offer me right now. I couldn't wait that long." Raghu was in agreement: "I could not have started a consulting business in India. But here, I can build my own business, go to a good business school and make a life for me and my family."

I looked at those two men, thought about their journey to this country and saw parallels with my grandfather. Sanjay and Raghu are both more educated than my grandfather ever was, but their reasons for coming to the US were the same. Maybe they didn't have a language barrier and they weren't fleeing a war, but their hope for freedom and a chance to have something better is the same. My grandfather would have approved. •

Defendants (in suits) Alexander Benedetto, William Labrador and Michael Spicer along with members of the jury tour the island.

Will It Be Dismissed?

After Considering Mistrial In Tortola Murder Case Will Judge Dismiss It Entirely?

By Jerry Cimisi

"William and I should be out planting flowers in the garden," said Barbara Labrador of Southampton, in a phone interview on April 30, as the murder trial involving her son William, and three other Americans, began its fifth week.

On the Caribbean Island of Tortola, the murder trial in which four Americans have waited since January, 2000 for their day in court, began in the first week of April. As the trial progressed, it seemed that the government was not able to bring forth anything concrete linking the four men with the murder of Connecticut artist Lois Livingston McMillen.

Ms. Labrador had inquired as to the weather in the Hamptons. When told that it was in the seventies, with eighty degree temperatures forecast for the rest of the week, she sighed. When it was remarked that this must be like the weather in Tortola, she said, "I know, but it's not the East End."

She went on: "It is amazing to me we're in the fifth week of a trial that has no evidence save the testimony of a fugitive felon."

With May beginning, the presiding High Court Justice Kenneth Benjamin has had to rule if the conduct of two jurors was grounds for a mistrial, and then consider the defense's motion that, after the prosecution has rested, it had presented no evidence whatsoever linking the accused to the crime and thus the case should be dismissed.

Last week two jurors left the courtroom for a brief time. The jurors – there are nine – are required to stay in the court while the trial is in progress.

The jurors had been discovered missing when meant that the defendants would have had to face a new trial and lengthen their already lengthy stay in prison, awaiting justice.

In the end the judge ruled there were no grounds for a mistrial. What may be more probable is that, with the prosecution finally resting its case, the court may rule favorably on the defense's motion to dismiss the trial on grounds that the government has not been able to produce any evidence for its case.

Paul Dennis, attorney for Alexander Benedetto, one of the defendants, stressed in his argument before the court that "There is no evidence."

Benedetto, along with the other men, William Labrador of Southampton, Michael Spicer of Virginia and Evan George of Washington, D.C. have been incarcerated since the beginning of last year without bail.

McMillen, who had known all four of the men, and had had dinner with them two days before her death, had had a brief relationship with Benedetto in 1997. A statement Benedetto made to police around the time of his arrest, said he had been the one to break off the relationship. This parting of the ways occurred in New York,

This excursion about the island was the first time since being jailed in January, 2000 that the defendants had left the confines of Her Majesty's Prison.

they had been called back from a lunch break. They returned, along with a police officer, fifteen minutes afterward. One juror told the judge she had not understood the court's instructions and that she had left briefly with the other juror to run an errand.

For a day or so it was considered possible, though not likely, that the judge would declare a mistrial. And if the judge had so ruled, this would have not Tortola. After having "an intimate relationship which lasted about three months," McMillen had spent a weekend with Spicer in New York and had invited him to meet her parents in Connecticut.

Benedetto said that at this point he did not want to continue seeing McMillen "because I noticed that she was behaving very strangely (i.e.) the things she said, the way she dressed, the feeling she gave off and the way she acted made me scared as well as other people."

Benedetto told her it was over between them and "asked her to go home and not to see me again."

Despite what he said about his uneasiness over McMillen's behavior, Benedetto has told police that the relationship had ended amicably.

About all the prosecution has had to go on in this trial has been the much contested testimony of a prison informant, Jeffrey Plante, a longtime conman, who had been serving time for fraud and had conversations with and overheard conversations between the defendants while serving time in Her Majesty's Prison. He said he had heard Labrador and Benedetto arguing about bringing a girl to the house, and claimed that Labrador had told him that he had killed McMillen by holding her underwater until she drowned.

Of course, Plante stands to gain a good deal if his testimony is accepted. He had been in violation of his parole in Texas and had the charges against him – for using a wife's credit cards without her permission – dropped when he gave the authorities his deposition about Labrador. But, after being free only a few months, he was arrested again, for passing thirty-two bad checks. Plante has a very good chance of being extradited to Texas – after serving time in Tortola – if the prosecution's case against the four men fails.

In what may be the most telling indication of Plante's personality, William Labrador's lawyer, Richard Hector, told the court that only days after Plante had first told the authorities about Labrador's alleged confession, he told Barabra Labrador, who had been visiting her son at the time, that he, Plante, was doing what he could to "help William," and he also wished her a Happy Mother's Day.

Ms. Labrador said, "Plante's parole officer from Texas, who will be one of our witnesses if the case isn't dismissed, said this man is a sociopath. He seems to have no idea of the consequences of his actions. I don't know if he lost that capacity somewhere along the way or if he was born like that."

The defense attorneys contend that the police have, since the beginning, pursued the investigation of the murder of Lois Livingston McMillen in slipshod manner. On the stand, Chief Inspector Anderson Blackman testified that someone had reported to the police finding McMillen's body a full hour before the police acted on a second person's discovery of the body.

As the prosecution's case drew to a close, the jurors were taken on a tour of sites connected with the murder. On the West End Beach where Lois McMillen's body had been found on a weekend morning in January, 2000, Joesphine and Russell McMillen stood, paused before a small cross that had been placed there.

The jurors – along with the defendants – also visited the Jolly Rogers Inn, where McMillen was last seen alive, and the area near the home of taxi driver Buelah Romney, who told police she heard a car stop by her house and someone screaming for mercy around midnight the last night of McMillen's life. This excursion about the island was the first time since being jailed in January, 2000 that the defendants had left the confines of Her Majesty's Prison.

As we went to press, the judge said he would rule on the issue of dismissal Thursday, May 3. •

Touch, intuition and humor have proven to be remarkable tools for healing and Ilana Rubenfeld, founder of the Rubenfeld Synergy Method (the "Aha!" healing method) will be demonstrating the integration of these elements in her innovative technique of talk and touch duets on May 11, 2001 at the Ross Institute Center For Well-Being.

A graduate of the Julliard School of Music, Ms. Rubenfeld was a celebrated conductor until a debilitating back spasm led her to a new and even more brilliant career as a healer.

While she sought ways to alleviate her back pain, Ilana Rubenfeld studied the Alexander Technique, the Feldendrais Method, Gestalt therapy, and Ericksonian hypnotherapy, distilled them into their purest forms and added humor, intuition, and a musical awareness to the sometimes conflicting harmonies that are interwoven in the body's tissue memories.

What the mind may have chosen to forget, the body's cells continue to carry in a silent, pervasive form that can block energy, interfere with clarity and stymie growth. This is the premise that the therapy of touch and talk comes from, and only someone experiencing a Rubenfeld healing session would know how very powerful this body/mind approach is.

The memory of an original shame, pain, joy or love can be restimulated instantly as the healer intuitively follows the progression of tissue messages the body sends to the clients' minds while they relive their personal history in a safe, completely accepting environment. By echoing the patient, the therapist serves as a clarifying witness to the events that created emotional responses etched in the body's cells.

Images, feelings and survival adjustments that may stem from the client's earliest experiences are evoked through electrical charges of sensitive, supportive, non-sexual touch.

Impressions that lie so deeply buried in the cells that the mind alone would be unable to access them resurface unexpectedly, are voiced by the patient, echoed and intuitively carried a step further by the therapist until they grow to a crescendo and eventually to an "Aha!" response.

Often the "Aha" remains silent within the patient, who may be overwhelmed with the emotion. It is at this crucial time that the skillful practitioner senses just what and how much to verbalize. A sensitive therapist, who orchestrates the session without any preconceived notion, follows the music of the client's body without any attachment to achieving a particular outcome. The response may come days afterwards in a ripple effect.

The tension in the cells that had caused an affliction dissolves. Suddenly the pain is gone. The cells have telegraphed a message to the mind; the mind has responded and sent back a new kind of message. This is how the effects of this powerful connection between the body and mind works. Everything the patient has ever experienced and reacted to in a deep way is lodged somewhere in the body and continues to radiate there until it is finally released through conscious awareness.

Ilana Rubenfeld of "Aha!"

The interconnectedness of the cells continues to trigger off additional "Ahas" in the mind for days and even weeks after the session. These mind/body "overtones" continue to resound in the newly awakened patient whose emotions may have been numbed to an overwhelming pain.

"I found there was a subtle muscular response to every emotion the client expressed. My touch seemed to help... get clear access to the unconscious."

The clarifying duet that has taken place between the therapist and patient brings about a feeling of finally having been heard and understood by another part of one's own self—on a cellular level—and creates an instant shift from isolation to having had a witness, an ally.

With this new paradigm, the client can then decide to put an end to automatic responses and make conscious choices his or her way of life. The client's body is in control again, and so is his or her mind. Once the body and mind are united in this way the client is at once whole and independent—free to make conscious choices.

The Ilana Rubenfeld Synergy Method of Talk and Touch could only have emerged from an innovator trained in music—a conductor who had learned the vibrations of harmonies and dissonance—a conductor who had united large orchestras comprised of countless musicians to perform in unity, with clarity and musicality.

The use of humor is invaluable, especially with on-going clients who have established a rapport with the therapist that allows for the ease of journeying into the incongruities of what may have been an excruciatingly painful experience.

Humor opens a door to seeing the bigger picture and can release tension while adding another perspective to the memory. Through humor, patients can transport the tragic into a "safe" realm of the ridiculous. Humor can sometimes be seen as the anesthesia that in some cases makes the operation possible. Only a sensitive therapist knows when the use of humor is appropriate.

Ilana Rubenfeld credits her training as an orchestral conductor for the orientation that developed her multichanneled perceptions. "When you're a conductor you have to be able to track 30 to 40 things at the same time," Ms. Rubenfeld said. "The discipline of studying to be a conductor changed my brain so that I could take all of that in."

Incapacitating back spasms are a common occupational hazard for conductors, who are forced to stand in front of an orchestra for hours of rehearsal. Ilana Rubenfeld first consulted with a practitioner of the Alexander Technique to learn a balanced and efficient posture that would reduce some of her spasms.

Her teacher's verbal instructions proved to relax her taut body, which immediately softened the rest of the way when her teacher applied gentle, non-intrusive touch. As she let go of tension she was overwhelmed with emotion—sometimes sobbing uncontrollably.

Ms. Rubenfeld followed the Alexander Technique with sessions of all-talk therapy, and while she found talking extremely helpful she began to wonder how much more effective her therapy would be if the two approaches were combined into a mind/body multidimensional approach of emotional healing. It was at this juncture in her life that Ilana Rubenfeld turned her passion for conducting into a dedication to experimenting with clinical applications of the Alexander Technique.

As a teacher of the Alexander Technique, she studied the psychophysical system of the body and began to do body work while simultaneously engaging the clients verbally.

"I found that there was a subtle muscular response to every emotion the client expressed," she said. "My touch seemed to help people get clearer access to the unconscious."

It was in the late '60s that Ilana Rubenfeld met Fritz Perls, the innovator of Gestalt Therapy, and discovered a verbal tool that ideally complemented the body-centered approach she was developing.

During the '70s Ilana Rubenfeld innovated her own Rubenfeld Synergy Method combining elements of the Alexander Technique with Gestalt Therapy and the movement therapy of Moshe Feldenkrais.

The Rubenfeld Method uses a padded massage table, which gives Ilana's approach its distinctive character. Ms. Rubenfeld now travels the world teaching and demonstrating the Rubenfeld Synergy Method, a healing practice that she has spent the past 40 years developing.

She is the founder of The Rubenfeld Synergy Center, (877) RSM-2468 (toll free) Website: ilanarubenfeld.com

The Center offers a four-year certification course in the Rubenfeld Method that includes: Gentle Touch, Psychophysical Education, Self-Care, Gestalt Practice & Verbal Expression, Humor, Expressive Arts, and Intuition.

Bantam Books recently published her book: The Listening Hand which gives her biography and numerous chapters giving instruction in techniques for overcoming specific problems.

Ilana Rubenfeld is considered to be a luminary in the industry of healing arts and has been lauded by equally outstanding peers.

Joan Borysenko, Ph.D., said of Ms. Rubenfeld's book, "In this book Ilana Rubenfeld has given us precious tools to heal ourselves. The exercises throughout the text are powerful and precise, honed through many years of healing and teaching. Each one is a jewel, capable of bringing about an "aha." The moment of "aha" is revelatory and life-changing."

Author of Reinventing Medicine and Healing Words, Larry Dossey, M.D., said, "Ilana Rubenfeld is the godmother of talk-and-touch therapies in our culture. Her insights have helped thousands find healing and fulfillment in their lives."

Robert Dauman at (516) 383-4345 (cell phone), and Dr. Elaine Chapline (631) 728-0753 are the only practitioners of the Rubenfeld Method on the East End at this time.

The Ross Institute Center For Well-Being will be presenting a lecture and demonstration by Ilana Rubenfeld entitled: "The Listening Hand: Rubenfeld Synergy Method" on Friday, May 11, 2001 at 7 p.m. Advance reservations recommended.

frances ann dougherty, a tribute

By Kimberly Goff

The Hamptons lost one of our outstanding citizens this week. For me it is a personal loss as well. Frances Ann Dougherty was one of my mothers closest friends and in recent years I can say the same. We have all traveled together and laughed together. Frances Ann had a very special way about her. She made people happy. She was energetic and fun and lively. Even at eighty-two she managed to be sexy and a little naughty. We will mourn the loss but mostly we celebrate her life. She lived life fully and she died peacefully at home without missing a beat.

Although the family gathered this past Sunday there will be a memorial for Frances Ann at the family home on Drew Lane in East Hampton. The Memorial has been set for June 2nd at 2:00pm. The family asked that in lieu of flowers donations be made to a special fund at LTV. The fund is called the Frances Ann and Elaine Fund, (LTV/FAEF), in memory of Frances Ann Dougherty and Elaine Benson, both of whom were actively involved with LTV, our local access television station. The fund will be for excellence in humor and creativity. There will be an annual award presentation.

So many memories come flooding back at the moment we realize we won't see a dear friend or loved one again. I remember Frances Ann with joy in my heart. She made us all feel so much love. She wanted me to feel like a member of the family. She told me to call her Fan Fan, a named reserved for her grandchildren. She always asked me the same question, "Do you know how much I love you?" I will always remember the love and the sexy smile and the slightly naughty laugh.

Although I'm a little too emotional I found I wasn't alone in this on Sunday. Cannon and Sierra, two of Frances Ann's grandchildren, cried along with me in a quiet moment when no one was looking. Frances Ann is survived by four of

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

SHELTERED ISLANDER #21 (SUMMER OF '98) A CRAB'S TALE

It's three years this month that I have written this column. Le Dan asked me to for one of my personal favorites. I have too many favorites, so I'm running my mother's all time favorite. Thanx to everyone for making this so much fun, the people at Dan's Papers and of course, the wonderful special Shelter Islanders.

You can get just about anything you need for vacation stuff from Bliss's and Jack's Marina which are next door to each other. Bliss's has clothes for people age 0 to 100, including shoes. They also have household goods, toys and a homemade fudge that is so good, you can't purchase it without a note from a cardiologist. Jack's has aquatic fare and an excellent toy store. One of the owners, Camille Anglin, is an educator and her selection of toys shows it. I can always get in for free, but it costs me about $30 to get out, more if I buy toys for the kids too...

It was a fine day last week when my handsome single brother David bought a new crab net from Jack's Marina. He took it to the nearby dock to test it. He scooped up two crabs who were ...busy.... threw the female back (the one with the earrings) and brought the male home to my kitchen sink and left it there.

After my two perfect children, the three things I love most in life are old movies, the look of new snow at dawn and crabs in the sink. I love any crustaceans in the sink, but crab is my favorite. This one had "sandwich" written all over him. He reached his claws high up to threaten me as he ran back and forth across the rubber mat on the bottom of the sink in a pitiful attempt to attack the pot that was being filled with water.... his eyes wildly rotating in different directions while his crablife passed before him. I looked him right in the eye that was looking at me and laughed sinisterly, "Arr, harr, harr...". And then it happened.

My beautiful eleven year old daughter came into the kitchen. She sized up the situation and began intervene to save marine life. "Oh, Mom, he's so cute. You can't eat him. That's too cruel. You can't boil him alive. What did he ever do to you?" I pleaded my case. He's part of the food chain, and tonight he's coming in just ahead of franks and beans. Hey, I am sensitive to the preservation of marine life... I give money to Greenpeace, I always cut up the plastic rings that hold soda's so that mantees won't get them wrapped around their noses. I pointed out to her that no manatee has EVER drowned in my kitchen...

She engaged every eleven year old strategy she had. She would brush her teeth everyday without being nagged, she'd stop calling the Pound to come and put her brother to sleep, she'd shower using soap and the coute d'gras - she'd clean her room! She was good...very good, but I held my ground as I decided whether to eat him on white or rye.

She stood at the sink between me and my crab. Like a Greenpeacer between a humpback and a harpoon. In the reflection of her steely blue eyes, I saw every crab salad I ever made. Every softshell sandwich, every cracked crab, crab cake, the Blueclaws and the Dungeness, the gallons of melted butter, it all came back to me in an overwhelming rush of memories. Surely, she implored, for all the crabs I have eaten, I could let this one go.

I was alone in a house with a nagging pre-teen. I held on as long as I could. But the parental mind can only take so much, then, like a crabshell, it cracks. Without another adult to help me hold onto reality, I lost it.

I reached for a tupperware container. Using a nearby sneaker I gave this very lucky crab something to hold onto while I lowered him in the container. He began to speak to me. He told me he was recently separated from his mate. She was special because it was his first female since Lois. Lois was a young lobster he loved. They tried to make a go of it. Their families objected because crabs walk sideways and lobsters walk straight and what of the offspring, they might walk diagonal... it was a moving moment.

I watched my blonde haired beauty put him in the basket of her bike and take off down West Neck Road to the boat launch to free him. I made some tea and sat down to collect myself after the Beach Performing Arts Center has been unveiled. Sure to be sell outs will be the Sarah Bernhard comedy special on July 21 and the Smokey Robinson concert and fundraiser for WHBPAC on August 18.

Rick Lazio sure gets around in the Hamptons. He was seen last week buying pillows in the Elegant John. Sleep tight, Rick.

Ben and Elke Gazzara are one of the nice things about the Hamptons. They have a beautiful home in Sag Harbor and when they are not busy shopping about town or heading into the city to visit friends, you can be sure it's about a new movie for Ben. This talented actor just doesn't stop getting scripts and we're glad about that. They've just got back from Argentina and Spain to the welcoming home dinner party given by John and Suzanne Mados at Le Cirque. Just in time for the starting of a new picture to be filmed in Toronto and another movie with Gena Rowlands and the beautiful Uma Thurman. Hurry back home guys, we miss you.

Another Hamptonite always surprising us with not only a great idea but also a great way of showcasing it is Marty Richards. Helen Hunt and Michelle Pfeiffer are interested in this project. It is a long-awaited film version of Chicago. Actresses already on line include Catherine Zeta-Jones, Renee Zellweger, Charlize Theron, Cameron Diaz and Jennifer Lopez. Did we leave anyone out? We could eliminate probably most of them though...they do have to try out by singing and dancing. Should be great to see.

For all of you out there who always felt Paul Simon's lyrics could easily stand out as poems on their own merit...we have good news. It seems he has been speaking here and there with some of his musician buddies about putting together ordeal. Then I heard the sound of a pickup truck in the driveway and shortly thereafter the sound of a man's boot's in the kitchen and the words, "Hey Sissy, where the hell's the crab?"

Since then, I've gotten one letter from the crab. He's doing well. He has written a book about being the only crab to have ever escaped a kitchen. He has a new job as spokescrab for the new Adjustomatic Kelpbeds. Disney has purchased rights to his story and is planning a summer blockbuster movie. The titles being considered are ; Claw Wars or maybe The Man Who Caught Liberty Crab and my personal pick, Gone With the Tide.

her own children, four of her husband Frazer's children, her husband, fourteen grandchildren and a million others who have loved her dearly.

An old story, well documented, deals with an early romance with John F. Kennedy. Although the families drove them apart they were quite taken with each other. He went on to meet and marry Jackie. She met and married the writer John Hersey around the same time. When I think about how long ago JFK died I realize that Frances Ann outlived this old suitor by quite a lot of time. It seems impossible to believe.

By the time Frances Ann Cannon Hersey met Frazer Dougherty, she had four children, had helped to start the National Repertory Theater, had produced five plays on Broadway, and other plays that toured around the country. Frazer contributed four children of his own to the marriage. After a few years of dividing their time between NYC and East Hampton, the couple settled in East Hampton and made trips, mostly by sailboat, to points unknown. The longest trip was through the Greek Islands. They were frequent visitors to Cuba and Mexico. They sailed from East Hampton to Maine. They sailed to Cuba. They often traveled with my mother and stepfather. I even surprised them in Cuba one winter when they were traveling with Mom and Joe. After Mom's husband Joe died we went to Hawaii together.

Frances Ann was on the Board at Guild Hall for many years. She was the chairwoman of their John Drew Theater for a time. She has also served on the board of her college (Sarah Lawrence) where the Cannon Theater was named for her.

Frances Ann never stopped telling me how much she missed my mother. If there is an afterlife as we've been told, I can only hope that my mother and Frances Ann are reunited and having a grand old time.

—Kimberly Goff

Hot new Hampton's artist, Mark Simon, is showing at the Paradise Café through Memorial Day weekend.

Sudsy of WLNG's Sudsy Sez appeared on Dateline NBC, Monday, April 30 with Mike Tahibbi. One of the highlights of the show was an interview with Maria Tennariello, the writer of the Shop 'til You Drop and Luxuries columns in Dan's Papers who talked with Sudsy on WLNG Radio last month. Sudsy also discussed the fake Rockefeller, whose scams were the talk of the Hamptons last summer.

THE GOLDEN BOWL

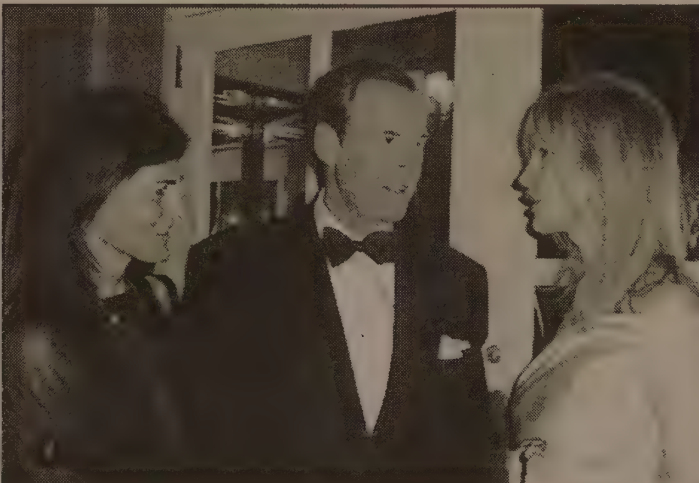

A prince has an affair with a sexy blonde but marries an heiress for money. His father-in-law, a billionaire, marries the blonde and all four are caught up in the undercurrents of passion, doing the right thing versus doing the hot thing. I think I read this in Page Six just last week. It is really an intense Henry James novel, The Golden Bowl, brought to the screen by the dynamic duo of Merchant and Ivory. The charity premiere for this film took place last Tuesday at the Paris Theatre in New York city for the benefit of the Hypertension Association with a gala post-screening dinner at the Essex Hotel.

BERGH BALL FOR ASPCA

Yes, I wanted to title this - "It's reining cats and dogs" but I wanted to prevent cruelty to readers. the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals had its annual Bergh Ball at the Plaza last week. The event is named for ASPCA founder Henry Bergh. The evening honored the late animal activist Roger Caras who passed away in February. This black tie dinner-dance raises money for the ASPCA among the largest organizations in the world dedicated to the humane treatment of animals.

The Children's Hearing Institute annual gala is always a blast. It has the energy that Dennis Basso and his friends have brought to it, and you never know what's going to happen. This year, one of the world's great guys, Marty Richards, was honored. I consider it a pleasure to know Marty and find him to be one of the most gracious, giving and humble people around, especially since he has plenty to crow about. Marty is one of the most prolific producers on Broadway with super hit shows like Chicago, La Cage Aux Folles and Sweeney Todd as well as a bunch of successful films. As I said, the unexpected is expected and this year, Joy Behar did the auction which may go down as the best standup comedy-auction on record. No one was safe from Joy's barbs as she insulted and cajoled attendees to up their bids. As a result, Caroline Hirsch is going to Paris, Denise Rich is going to be a Soprano for a day and John Heyman has a new coat.

Rites Of Spring

By Susan Simm

Here on the North Fork we celebrate certain rites of spring: the first robin, alewives starting to run in the creeks, returning ospreys, fields that are plowed, crocuses blooming. When farmers start planting potatoes and other vegetables, we begin to look forward, in all earnest, to a bountiful summer.

But what local delicacies can we devour now? The earliest crops harvested in the new season have recently started and everyone should take advantage of them.

Our early springtime asparagus has to be one of our main reasons for living in this agricultural paradise. Asparagus has been cultivated for over 2,000 years; the name derives from the Greek. In fact, Louis XIV had his gardeners grow it in greenhouses so that he could enjoy it year-round. (Yes, I do believe you can have too much of a good thing, maybe even a great thing!) Seventy percent of all asparagus grown in the U.S. comes from California and, much more surprising, only 10% of it is eaten either canned or frozen.

This perennial vegetable – one of only two, the other being rhubarb – is a classic platemate for a grilled steak and baked potato. It is beginning to be available at many local farm stands now as they are starting to cut their crop. We can expect to enjoy the young, tender spears for about a month. I love asparagus prepared simply by washing, trimming the bottoms and steaming them. But here is an asparagus preparation that makes a terrific change of pace and is packed with flavor.

First, preheat your oven to 375 degrees, then wash and trim the asparagus, peeling the stems if they are really thick (ideally, the spear should be of a uniform diameter throughout) and pat dry with paper towels. In a small roasting pan, put a small amount of peanut like them to be, take them out and serve. Delicious! (Note: the heads will crisp before the stems, so it is very important to toss them about a little as they cook.)

Another early spring crop is the versatile spinach. I know what you are thinking, isn't this that same stuff that I wouldn't eat when Mom made it for me? Sure, but here is a super simple and elegant way to prepare fresh local spinach that Mom probably didn't try.

For a simple, low-fat alternative to creamed spinach, slice a clove or two (depending on your taste) of garlic into a sauté pan. Add a small amount of olive oil, heat and when the pan is hot (but not smoking!) toss in your washed, well dried and stemmed spinach. Once the spinach has wilted, cover the pan and turn off the heat. The pan will be hot enough to steam the spinach to finish cooking it. Note: stemming the spinach is important because the stems are stringy. Also, remember that the wilting will reduce the spinach by more than half, so if you think you have stemmed enough, you probably haven't.

Spinach has one of the longest growing seasons of any vegetable on Long Island. Farmers plant spinach continually throughout the season and the spinach that is being harvested now was actually planted last fall.

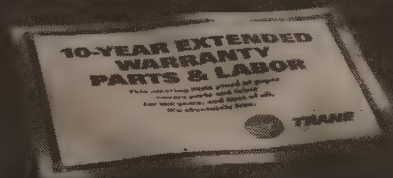

Asparagus, on the other hand, is of the 'here and gone' variety. May is really the only month for this wonderful vegetable. It will be sad to see the asparagus go, around Memorial day, but right on its heels will be another local classic: strawberries!

oil. Add a dash or two of sesame oil. Place the asparagus spears in the pan, tossing to coat well with the oil, then liberally salt them. Roast the asparagus for about 25-35 minutes, depending upon size and desired crispness, rolling them around in the pan several times during the cooking time. When they get as crispy as you would

Long Island Vineyard Pioneer Honored

At the conclusion of his presentation of the work and plans of the New York Wine and Grape Foundation to an audience of winery owners and managers and members of the media, James Trezise, the President of the Foundation, called on Richard Olsen-Harbich, of Raphael Wineries in Peconic, who is a member of the Board of Directors to present the 'Grower of the Year' Award to the Mudd family of Southold.

In his speech, Richard paid tribute to the pioneering and visionary approach of David Mudd, the founder of Mudd Vineyards Ltd., who has been instrumental in the initial developments of so many of today's big names in the annals of Long Island wine.

"Since 1974, when you planted your first acre, you have helped so many people and you were involved in the beginnings of what today are the Pindar, Lenz, Jamesport, Laurel Lake and Bedell vineyards, to name but a few. You brought in the first mechanical harvester for grapes, hydraulic pruners, drip irrigation and infra red aerial photography. It gives me great pleasure to present this award to you and Stephen and all of the Mudd family."

Following this, Harold Watts, President of the Long Island Wine Council, made an award of 'Emeritus Member' to David Mudd again as a recognition of the invaluable work he and his company have done with the Long Island wine industry over the past 27 years and which has been a significant part of the growth of Long Island wines to the prestigious level they enjoy today, with wine lovers not just in this country but increasingly in countries such as the UK, Canada and France.

Wine And Grape Foundation Helping Long Island Wine Industry

The New York Wine and Grape foundation was set up in 1985 primarily to help out the grape growers who were in deep economic distress. Today the private, not for profit organization sets out to centralize and coordinate promotion and research for grape juice, table grapes and wine across New York State. At a recent meeting in Riverhead, James Trezise, the foundation's president, explained how they are actively working to secure stable adequate funding to attain their long term goal of making the New York grape and wine industry recognized as a world leader in quality, productivity and social responsibility.

Among the programs he discussed was the use of private sector funds, with matching grants from the foundation. He singled out the work which will be undertaken by Alice Wise at the Cornell Cooperative Extension of Suffolk County in Riverhead. "Galluccio Estates has given $25,000 to support the work

Alice Wise is doing on the cloning of grapevines and also on specific research on the varieties of grapes grown on Long Island.

"Now I am pleased to tell you that she will also receive matching funds of about $15 to $16,000 from the Foundation as a result of the gift from Galluccio Estates. This is a prime example of how we can work together to help the overall industry and I hope this will stimulate further research donations especially to support projects in the field of oenology which currently is very undefended."

The news of this grant was enthusiastically received by the Long Island members of the Foundation's board,

Richard Olsen-Harbisch of Raphael Vineyards and Susan Bedell of Bedell Cellars. Jane Baxter Lynn, the executive director of the Long Island Wine Council, expressed her pleasure at this very positive news for the Long Island wine industry and also at the news of two major promotional projects which Jim Trezise announced. On August 21 and 22, the New York Wine and Food Classic will be held at the Hudson River Club in New York and the winning wines will be poured subsequently at a dinner at the Governor's mansion. Then, October will be featured as New York Wine and Food month in New York City and this again will be a great opportunity for Long Island wines to show their strengths.

From some of the comments made during the meeting it was obvious that, in some quarters, the Wine and Grape Foundation has been regarded as too biased in favor of the Finger Lake area, but there seemed to be a consensus now that the Long Island sector of this increasingly important industry, which brings major revenue and jobs and boosts tourism in the area, is receiving its true recognition and also that Long Island wineries are now fully realizing the benefits which can be obtained through using the services of the foundation, particularly when matters involving state government or research grants are concerned. —Roy Bradbrook

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

The other day I was channel surfing, and during my travels came upon a scene from an old black and white movie. I settled in for a few minutes and was mesmerized by the lighting and camera movements. Everything looked just right. Orson Wells and Edward G. Robinson starred, and during the end credits, I discovered that the film was called The Stranger. Sure enough, it was written and directed by the master himself, Orson Wells.

The point of all this is that it occurred to me, when something looks right, as in the scene that caught my eye, it usually is right.

When it comes to classic cars, some cars look so correct that they have been enamored by the public since the day they were first built. To this day, I'm stunned everytime I see an early '50s Jaguar XK-120, or even an XK-140 or XK-150 model. But it's the 120 that's the real beauty here. Being the first model in the series, the 120 has a purity of design that is simpler than the later models. The detail of the protruding headlights growing out from the front fenders is pure design genius. They defined the front of the Jaguar for years, a design element that has never again been seen on any other production automobile.

Another car that stunned the world with its correctness was, of all things, another Jaguar. A bolt of lightning lit up the London Motorcar show in 1962 in the form of the shark-nosed, predatory, futuristic Jaguar E-Type. Just as it seemed unlikely that Jaguar would, could, ever design a car more beautiful than the XK 120...but WHAMMO, here was the future, the swinging sixties: the new XK-E and suddenly, sadly, the old design 120 shriveled in its sensuous, long nosed shadow.

There were two German cars that looked really right when they were first introduced. One blew people's minds and the other was met with a collective yawn. The dullard of the two was such a timeless design that the same body shape stayed in production for about thirty-three years.

I'm talking about the 1954 Mercedes-Benz Gullwing coupe and the 1963 Porsche 911. When the 300SL was introduced, it caused a sensation. It was technically advanced, having a race car derived space frame and also boasting a new type of fuel delivery system: fuel injection. The car was downright beautiful in a brutish, Teutonic sort of way, and being a Mercedes, it had legendary build quality. It was the car everyone wanted, and the car to be seen in. Indeed you were noticed, because in this car you had the bragging rights to drive in slow traffic with those hefty gullwing doors in the full open-upright position. I've always enjoyed the Gullwing, because the excitement begins even before you turn the key, for opening the doors and twisting your body over the wide sills is an adventure in itself.

The other German car that has always looked right is the Porsche 911. When first introduced in 1964, it wasn't so exciting looking because it bore a strong family resemblance to the earlier Porsche 356. I drove one of the first 911s introduced in America, and was frankly underwhelmed with both the looks and the performance of the car. Little did anyone, including the Porsche factory, ever imagine that this basic shape would last almost forever.

When discussing beauty in automobile design, honorable mention must go to the Italian automobile designers. The 1948 Cisitalia, designed by the world's leading car designer PininFarina, is the one design that started it all. Since then, the Italian designers have crafted various Ferraris, Maseratis and Alfa-Romeos that have body shapes and design details that are so creative and beautiful that they have influenced the design of all cars.

There is a trend today for retro-looking cars. What these designers are doing is simply taking the forms that were perfect the first time out and modernizing them. The new VW Bug, the Mazda Miata and the Chrysler PT Cruiser are all selling well, because they are familiar shapes that have always been admired.

Now if we could only get Mercedes to remanufacture the 300SL Gullwing. Modernize the chassis and engine if you have to, but don't change a single line of that gorgeous body. And oh, leave those magnificent doors alone.

GOLFING

The Ups And Downs Of Rock Hill Golf Club

Rock Hill Golf & Country Club's first nine holes were opened back in 1964, followed by the back nine the following year, which makes this a venerable golf course by Long Island time scales. The course was designed and laid out by Frank Duane, who had worked mainly on golf course projects in the Southern States before tackling the task of turning this farmland into a top class public golf course.

Today the course measures 6,465 yards from the regular tees and a testing 7,050 yards if you are inclined to test yourself from the championship tees. Ladies tees play at 5,390 yards. Par is 71 for men and 72 for ladies.

Bob Becker took over as Head Golf Professional at Rock Hill on February 1 this year after having been the Assistant Professional for 12 years, so he has an intimate knowledge of the course. "We are open all year round, weather permitting," he said. "This winter was very tough but the course is coming into shape nicely and we are hoping for some regular warm days to help us. We are making some slow changes but our aim, as always, is to make these for the betterment of the game and to serve our customers better and send them away happy with the time they have spent with us."

The opening hole measures a gentle 375 yards but immediately poses problems if your drive is not down the right side, for sand traps and out of bounds lurk on the left. Then you hit into a green, which is angled away to the right and which also has a distinct back to front slope.

The 2nd hole is a delight with a beautiful vista of the pine barrens. This 530 yard hole is rated the third most difficult on the course. After driving from the elevated tee over sunken tees, which has the same intimidating effect as trying to carry over lengthy waste bunkers spaced cleverly to catch a wayward shot. When you do reach this shallow, elevated green, it slopes right to left and downhill putts of ten don't hold the green. This hole is regarded by many of the regular players at Rock Hill as the signature hole of the course.

The 3rd and 4th holes are pleasant reliefs but then you are faced with the 5th, the most difficult hole according to the official ratings. Although only a modest 360 yards from the regular tees, this is a challenge for golfers at all levels. Your drive needs to be down the left and from the sloping fairway, the next shot to an elevated green usually needs a club or two longer than your first impression. Coming away with a par here is a real achievement. The next hole may well provide problems, for the 360 yard 6th is a dramatic hole with a blind tee shot, to be played over a hill (or else the next one is also blind). The approach is over water to the green.

The final three holes on the front nine may offer you some time to relax and enjoy the very pleasant park land scenery of the Rock Hill course before moving onto the back nine and deciding whether to shorten the 360 yard 11th by driving over the sharp dogleg to the left from the tee. If you do, beware of the bunkers and a ditch set there to foil your bravery (or foolhardiness), because you need to be well placed for your approach to a green guarded left and right by more bunkers.

The long 12th, at 535 yards, is another challenging hole because the approach to the two-tiered green has water at the front and sand at the rear and sides guarding the hole. The short 13th requires you to carry your tee shot over water to reach the green if you are to come away with a par or better and after playing the next two holes you had better be ready for a test as you take on the last three holes. The 435 yard 16th is a dogleg left and both the tee shot and approach to the green have to be well placed. If you succeed in getting on in two you have done very well. The last short hole is the 170 yard 17th which appears relatively innocuous but all I can say is that the average score of our fourball on this hole was appalling, proving there is no such thing as an innocuous golf hole. The final hole measures all of 425 yards and requires a long uphill tee shot to a right dogleg fairway, which has a sharp right to left slope. When you reach the green it slopes from back to front so if you are long the putting from behind the hole can make for an interesting close to the round.

Over tree tops en route to the second fairway

Rock Hill also operates a Golf School and Michael Jacobs is the Director of Instruction. The school has won national acclaim, being nominated by Golf Magazine last year for their list of the Top 25 golf schools in America. They offer a full range of programs catering to beginners and the more experienced golfer and use some of the most modern video-based systems in their tuition.

The greens fees at Rock Hill vary from $36 during the week to $42 at the weekend and the cart fee is $16 per person. Special rates are available for Twi-Lite rounds and seniors.

Starting out in Westhampton Beach I stopped in at Nautique National Flag on Montauk Highway for a look at their flags and banners that include U.S. marine, foreign, historic and fun flags. There are custom flags and burgees, weathervanes and cupolas and much more. Nautique installs, repairs and does site consultations, also.

Look for great buys and quite a selection of designer clothing at incredible discount prices at Val's Closet on Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays. Don't miss the "Spring Sidewalk Sale" with sales from 15% to 80% off the entire stock. Showing at Val's are DKNY, Laundry, BCBG, Calvin Klein, Easel Abs, and much more. This shop is one of my favorites.

Also in Hampton Bays at Hampton Nursery on Montauk Highway, they can create the setting for the spring season with flowering shrubs, trees, tulips, daffodils, you name it, they have it...

At the John Rogers Outlet on Main Street in Southampton the steamer chairs have just arrived and they are very affordably priced at $199. Check it out.

On Jobs Lane at eden rocks the entire store is already thinking spring. Their shipments of straw bags have just arrived. Get going for the best selection possible.

At Pier One Imports on Montauk Highway in Southampton, you will save 20% to 50% off during their dining sale that will be ending on May 5. This sale includes dining sets, dinnerware and glassware.

I love "Yard Sales." How about you? At 2983 Montauk highway in Sagaponack there will be an inventory yard sale to benefit the Hayground School that includes dealer's collection antiques, paintings, folk art, artifacts and much more. From classic to eclectic, mark your calendar for Saturday and Sunday, May 12 and 13 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Have fun and enjoy the day here.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Spring Shopping!

"NATURE IN TRANSITION" AT ARLENE BUJESE

Weather can account for a lot of things, especially if it's grey and gloomy outside. Which is exactly what it was like when this critic visited the current show at East Hampton's Arlene Bujese Gallery. While the exhibit is devoted to nature, and by inference, to spring, it didn't leave this particular viewer with a sense of innovation, energy or anything resembling an uplifted spirit, a demeanor usually associated with winter's end.

Perhaps it was simply a matter of false expectations. Or perhaps a matter of semantics. After all, "transition" means something in process, something not quite there yet – whether that "something" is spring or an art show.

The truth is, this exhibit hits the mark more clearly

"Psychter" by M. Weil

when we see it as "artists," not nature, in transition. Consider Deborah Black's "Evolution 1 & 2." The colors are not her usual dark ones, nor are the forms her traditional trees. She has become more spontaneous and expansive, "evolving" to include more abstract shapes that leap off the canvas.

Helen Meyrowitz' abstractions also bounce into space, her charcoal skips nearly matching Ms. Black's crayon swirls. Like Ms. Black, too, Ms. Meyrowitz does not stick to her usual configurations, but her boundless energy is still present, nonetheless.

Bruce Lieberman's large canvas, "Blue Eyes Sky," doesn't feature his usual kind of subject or style either.

He seems more spontaneous as well, leading to abstractions that are not only somewhat impressionistic but more interesting.

Hans Van De Bovenkamp's sculptures are thought-provoking and well-designed; they also appear somewhat different (and transitory, perhaps) from his past work in their overt "heaviness," when dealing with material and complex themes.

Conversely, sculpture by Marianne Weil seems lighter by comparison, both in size and scope. Simply speaking, it's easier to get a handle on their formal aesthetics and concepts, deriving from both ornate and primal configurations and themes.

Other artists' work can't be labeled "transitional," however, their pieces solid, recurring examples of effective techniques and lucid visions: in particular Rae Ferren's "Beach Walk"; Priscilla Bowden's "Wainscott Pond in October" and Ty Stroudsburg's "Winter Sunflowers."

"Nature in Transition" will be on view until May 7.

HONORING THE ARTIST: Michelle Karon

Michelle Karon is moving in a few days from her Sag Harbor home to nearby North Haven. Her current residence reflects this move, with overflowing boxes and various piles of clutter everywhere the eye can see. Her two enormous dogs complete the picture, one of "controlled chaos," according to Ms. Karon. In one way, this scene is not an unusual one; it's well-known to anyone who has endured the trials and tribulations of moving.

Such a description is not unique to Ms. Karon for other reasons. To hear Ms. Karon tell it, her life has mirrored this very same "controlled chaos" as well. Whatever the demeanor used to define her life, however, Ms. Karon has apparently handled most things that have come down the pike.

Take Ms. Karon's various professional pursuits for example as she recalls her first foray into art when she was a little girl. "I borrowed my mother's hot pink lipstick and did a painting on the wall. I was an 'early graffiti kid,'" she says with a smile.

While she was born in Manhattan, the future artist grew up on the North Shore, where she remembers her public high school days with fondness, primarily because teachers encouraged her creativity – a situation which is somewhat unique by today's standards. Yet there was one exception which Ms. Karon recalls with glee: "I remember my art class and the fact that everyone did typical projects except for me. I made an exotic animal, an anteater, and the assistant principal called me into his office and took away my project because it looked too sexual."

Encouragement and risk-taking continued to pay off, however, when Ms. Karon found herself involved with designing and manufacturing clothes. This time it was her father who pushed her into the profession, along with another man who told her, "You're always covered with paint. Can you whip up a design?" Ms. Karon could and did, subsequently finding her clothes displayed in Bloomingdale's windows.

The fact that Ms. Karon is a self-admitted sponge ("I'm self-taught; I take in everything around me," she says) has also helped her in life. She's pursued her art in Brittany, France, where the "light is like Montauk's," hiked and biked in the Canadian Rocky Mountains, written (or is writing) a screenplay, and crewed on a yacht.

Ms. Karon's art not only reflects her diverse interests but also represents different styles, all very personal and evocative of times, places and emotions. Consider this week's cover, a poppy field in Water Mill which Ms. Karon says she discovered "while riding a motorcycle as the sun was going down." Consider, also, other paintings where texture plays an important part (her sand and raw silk landscapes) or where color bands interact with arresting results. And we can't forget her works that possess a political thrust, concerning global warming, for example.

No matter what direction Ms. Karon's art has taken over the years, there's a fluidity and energy about them which recall her own sense of being alive – her own penchant for "watching things grow."

MEMORY? FORGET ABOUT IT

like: Do you remember the Chez La Batte Restaurant about where the East Hampton Cinema is now? Instead, I'll write about MEMORY'S pertinence to the movies, MEMENTO, a darkly, complex thriller obsessed with memory and is one of the most ingeniously cinematic films worth seeing twice. You may have to. If your memory is faulty . . . there is CROC ODILE DUNDEE IN L.A., a breezily simplistic, harkening-back to CROC I. 1986 and CROC II 1988 . . . wherein, the less you recall about the original films . . . the better. Holy Moly! Were those Australian flash-backs to the outback that long ago? If you recall the original CROC (which was very original) you will remember why it was a worldwide huge hit. BON MOTS AND CHOCOLATE BONBONS . . . OKAY BUT, CHOCOLATE COVERED BOOBS ON LTV LOCAL TV BOOB TUBES?

Jane Austin definitely did not inspire this film by Heather Buchanan, Sag Harbor Resident and all 'round smart young woman. . . having written and directed ON THE ROCKS that is deliciously (everyone loves chocolate) wacky, hazardously hilarious and as disarming as the topless Venus de Milo. Ms. Buchanan's cheerful tale of woe covers the all-but-lost-weekend of two close women friends who suddenly find their lives dashed ON THE ROCKS. What better way to survive and keep afloat, than to drown their sorrows with quarts of colorful cocktails whilst cast away . . . beached on the Bridgehampton dunes in a snazzy beach house. Unable to face the outside world they moan, they groan, they bicker, they snicker, but, always with a concluding laugh and a rum-soaked truism. The sniggers, the complaints, the wit-stained put-downs and up-hill cranking of an unjust world continue along with the drinks even as a bit of help enters their sequestered world. They somehow manage without toilet paper and tampons. Cleverly, they order in some eats from the Sagg General Store . . . with extra napkins. Then some handymen arrive en scene and so, to the banter and cocktails and carping and cocktails, fashion shows and cocktails . . . oh yes, I think there's some coffee . .

On The Rocks

well, add to that . . . carnal lust. For you yokels... that's sex with local repairmen.

Our local audiences have asked, What is a Movie Made Here? There is so much that goes into making a movie, it covers a wide area. For instance, our premiere screening featured a film by 15 year old Carlos Ferrer, of Southampton titled, Dreaming of You. It was shot entirely in Manhattan but, it was conceived and written here and the editing was done in his own home out here. Some movies simply have segments or scenes shot here. ON THE ROCKS was done entirely out here, and it was very well done. Ms. Buchanan has lived elsewhere but, Sag Harbor is home now with roots extending down to Potato Road in Sagaponack and very likely far and wide. She will go a long way but I hope NOT as far as the two stars in her movie. I don't know. Heather seems like such a nice young woman. Is this somewhat raunchy but, always funny and wise movie really hers? Something else! are the dynamic duo who are on the rocky road to total disaster and doom but, are they?

It all begins with mascara-streaming-down the cheeks phone calls. Lily, a popular soap opera actress, finds herself dumped from the show, without future prospects. Bebe, who lives uncomfortably with family wealth in Greenwich, Manhattan and their summer beach house, finds she's been left high and dry by her husband. He took off with his secret boy friend. Bebe's mother knew it all the time. Bebe and Lily, ready to end it all, Jitney out to the East End where their misadventures include starring in a public access TV cooking show with novel notions that Martha Stewart would not dream of like overcharging the charcoal grill with explosive results, encrusting their breasts with chocolate to make interesting dessert cups . . . then discussing sex with "Girl Guides" is also misguided . . . as is their attempted Thelma and Louise fiery finale. Be there to see how it all ends! It all happens:

Saturday, May 12th at 2 PM in the Ross School Library off Route 114 in East Hampton, 18 Goodfriend Drive. It's the first building on the right. There will be refreshments but, the most refreshing elements will be the movie and its' writer/director, Heather Buchanan, to discuss her film with us.

world with a series of promotional spots on TV. His sunny, charming, "G'day" (pronounced, g'die) blossomed into the big screen super-amiable crocodile hunter, Mick Dundee, who comes out of the outback at the behest of a beautiful U.S. reporter to return with her to New York where he would encounter perils, totally new to him, but, he is able to cope perfectly with any situation always and always with his affable smile and totally unruffled good wishes because of the uncanny skills learned surviving a lot of things like crocodiles that are more dangerous than a Subaru Outback but, a lot less expensive to feed.

AUSSIE CROCS TO HOLLYWOOD SHARKS

If you remember all that very well, then you may not be too enthralled with Mr. Hogan's very well-tanned hide basking in Los Angeles' sunny problems, for there isn't that much difference. Oh, yes, in L.A., Dundee notes the muggers don't have to get out of their cars. Hogan's real-life girlfriend, Linda Kozlowski, is still Dundee's luv and there's a son, Mikey, though Mom's still Ms. Charleton but, trust me, there's nothing racy about Hogan's third outing. It's slow and steady and harmless as a tortoise and in the end . . . nicely winning.

I'm stepping up onto my soapbox. Catch me if I tumble. Ahem . . . a youngish woman, in the nasty racket of movie reviewing, criticized endlessly, Mr. Hogan's wrinkled, reptile-like, aged skin . . . generally indicating that he should be minding kangaroos from a rocking chair. I don't think she would like a female actor to be judged for showing a few years, especially not, if one's not pretending to be a youth! Besides! Take a look at Dundee! As with crocodiles down under, aging actors are an endangered species and should be protected.

MEMORIES, MEMENTOS OF THINGS PAST

From the steep, dank shadows of Film Noir, writer/director Christopher Nolan, has dredged a dizzying memory-loss drama and cast it out into the broad, blinking, sun-powered daylight of some seamy districts of Los Angeles. Not so strangely, the glaring light of day only heightens the frightful, obsessive, cataclysmic spin of a man in a spooky, seemingly impossible hunt for an unseen psycho who raped and killed his wife. Like the Fugitive, Leonard Shelby (an extraordinary performance by Guy Pierce) interrupts the murder of his wife. The attacker cracks Leonard's head against a mirror, closing a part of his brain off from the retention of any and all immediate events. He forgets anything that transpires . . . after only a few minutes!

The only way he can carry on his vengeance seeking is by taking Polaroid photos of people and places and making notes on them of what he thinks might be facts. The things he seems certain of, he has tattooed on his body or inks them in himself. You are right if you think it to be a nightmare, and the director has turned it into a brilliant mosaic of flashes, flashbacks and flashy cinema-story-telling from Leonard's time-warped mind. After all, memory is simply a compilation of flash-backs. But, Leonard's mind cannot now recognize time . . . the film builds from end to beginning. Think of creating an orange from it's most inner parts to the final outer bright layer. Grab this juicy, tangy, difficult to digest, fruitful piece of movie making . . . it's a pip.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

It seems as though, at every party, of one kind or another that I've been to in recent years, phyllo wrapped food, in one shape or another, was always present.

Phyllo is the light, paper-thin pastry dough we have come to know in Greek cookery. This versatile dough can be wrapped, stacked and rolled around any number of savory to sweet fillings. Most people believe, however, that phyllo's usefulness begins with spanakopita, the spinach and feta cheese pie, and ends with baklava, a deliciously sweet nut pastry. The truth is that any food you can mold, roll or wrap can be made with phyllo. Caterers discovered this gem of a product many years ago and have used it widely. Phyllo based recipes are visually attractive, convenient to serve and provide a light crunch to a variety of International favorites.

Try the crunchy phyllo cheese sticks for a quick hors d'oeuvres, a rapid spinach pizza using whole wheat phyllo or the "beggars purses" filled with a delectable mushroom ragout.

Cooks of Greek heritage remember their mothers and grandmothers preparing phyllo by hand, and perhaps some still do, but it is rare. Today while the product is widely available in supermarkets it is almost always frozen sometimes making the inner leaves "clump" and difficult to work with. The good news is fresh phyllo is accessible and working with fresh, rather than frozen is a revelation. I have had such fun using a quality product from the Fillo Factory, as the dough's silky smooth texture is infinitely easier to handle. Fresh phyllo can be mail-ordered by calling the Fillo Factory in Dumont, NJ at (210) 439-1039 or by logging onto their website at www.fillofactory.com. It can be stored in the refrigerator for up to 3 months. Whole-wheat phyllo, however, is only available frozen and can be kept in the freezer for up to a year.

PHYLLO CHEESE STICKS

When preparing phyllo recipes there are always extra leaves of dough leftover. These cheese sticks are fun, easy to make, and addictive. They keep well in an airtight container at room temperature for several days.

Makes 25-30 cheese sticks

25-30 quartered sheets of phyllo, cut lengthwise
Vegetable oil
1/2 - 2/3 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

1. Remove phyllo from box, unwrap then unroll on a clean, dry work surface. With a sharp slicing knife, cut phyllo layers in half crosswise, then cut lengthwise in half again. Cover the required number of sheets with a lightly dampened towel. Roll up remaining sheets and return to its plastic casing and box. Refrigerate until ready to use again, up to 3-4 weeks.

2. Place a small cup of oil next to your work area. Work with 2 phyllo sheets at a time. Dip the tips of your middle fingers of one hand and flick over the surface of the dough, 2 or 3 times. Coat each layer with Parmesan cheese and stack evenly one over the other. Starting at one end, fold the sheet envelope style and roll up. Continue until all are done and arrange on a lightly greased cookie sheet.

3. Place cheese sticks in preheated oven and bake until golden brown and crisp, about 12-14 minutes. Serve hot or at room temperature. They store well in a cookie tin, up to a week or more.

MUSHROOM RAGOUT IN PHYLLO PURSES

Place almost any filling in a square of pastry or phyllo dough, then pull up the sides and give it a twist to make charming little purses.

Makes 8 purses

1 pound mixed shitake and white button mushrooms, stemmed
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 large shallots, finely chopped
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1/4 cup dry white wine
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons finely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley

For the phyllo

24 halved phyllo sheets
1/4 - 1/3 cup vegetable oil

1. Rinse mushrooms quickly in a colander (do not allow them to get waterlogged) then dry them well with paper towels. Slice mushrooms thinly.

2. Pour oil in a large, 10-12-inch, non-stick skillet and heat over medium heat. Put in mushrooms and saute, stirring, until they begin to change color, about 3-4 minutes. Add shallots and garlic, stirring until shallots are translucent, about 2-3 minutes longer. Deglaze pan with white wine, stirring until wine almost evaporates. Season mushroom mixture with salt and pepper to taste, add parsley and stir to mix. Remove from heat and allow to cool. Can be done ahead to this point.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

3. To make the purses unroll a package of phyllo and cut the sheets in half lengthwise. You will need 24 half sheets in total. Cover phyllo with a lightly dampened clean kitchen towel while you work. Work with 3 phyllo sheets at a time, dip middle fingers of one hand into the cup of oil and flick your fingers to lightly cover the surface of each sheet to the edges. Continue until you have 3 layered sheets.

4. Divide the mushroom mixture into 8 even piles. Place evenly divided mushroom pile in the center of each layered set of phyllo sheets. Pull up the edges around the filling and slightly twist the ends. Arrange side by side on a lightly oiled cookie sheet and sprinkle tops lightly with oil.

5. Place in preheated oven and bake until golden brown and crisp, about 12-14 minutes. Serve hot.

WHOLE WHEAT PHYLLO PIZZA

The goodness of whole wheat gives this pizza a distinctive appearance, aroma and texture.

Serves 6-8

For the filling

2 tablespoons olive oil
3 large shallots, finely chopped
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 1/2 pounds fresh spinach, blanched and squeezed dry - or 2 10-oz. boxes frozen spinach, thawed and squeezed dry
1 teaspoon dry oregano, crumbled
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Freshly ground pepper to taste

For the phyllo crust

7-8 full sheets whole-wheat phyllo dough
1/4 cup vegetable oil (more as needed)
2 medium tomatoes, peeled, seeded and diced
1 cup grated mozzarella cheese
1/2 pound feta cheese, crumbled
Fresh unseasoned breadcrumbs

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

1. In large skillet heat oil over medium heat and put in onions. Saute for 2-3 minutes, add garlic and saute for 1-2 minutes longer. Put in the prepared spinach and cook, stirring occasionally, until moisture evaporates. Add oregano, lemon juice and pepper and stir to mix. Taste for seasoning and set aside to cool.

2. Defrost any frozen phyllo dough overnight in refrigerator. Cover phyllo with a lightly dampened towel to keep moist while working. Lightly grease a 12"x14" cookie sheet. Place one sheet of phyllo on the cookie sheet. Dip middle fingers of one hand into the oil and flick, 2-3 times to coat the surface of the dough. Working quickly, repeat procedure with remaining sheets to form a base.

3. Spread the spinach mixture on the prepared crust leaving a 1 1/2-inch border. Roll up the edges as well as possible (it doesn't have to be perfect.) Arrange diced tomatoes in a single layer over the filling. Top with grated mozzarella and feta, then sprinkle with breadcrumbs.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

4. Bake phyllo pizza in preheated oven for 25-30 minutes until golden brown and cheese is melted. Cut into squares or wedges like a pie and serve hot.

Silvia Lehrer will give a hands-on workshop, "Working With Phyllo," on Friday, May 18 and Saturday, May 19 from 10:15 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. In this in-depth class we will cover the history, techniques and tips for success in working with and handling phyllo. A medley of useful and timely recipes with a variety of fillings will be prepared. Students will lunch on the recipes prepared in class and take home samples of each. Class size is limited to 8 students, so call (631) 537-7831 for registration or email Silvia at Cookhamptn@aol.com

Gardening

The Well-Contained Garden

By Susan Simm

Container gardens are not snobs. Like favorite houseguests, they are equally at home on oceanfront estates and humble cottages. No matter your station in life or Hamptons address, there is a potted container garden that's perfect for you.

Although this is an invitation to let your imagination soar, there are a few guidelines that, if followed, will push toward perfection what might otherwise become a tangle of unhappy inhabitants.

First, and most importantly, consider location. Take note of how many hours of direct sunlight your chosen spot receives before deciding on plant varieties. If you plan to set your container in the corner of a shady terrace, sun-loving plants will fair poorly, no matter how much attention they receive. Likewise a hot, sunny deck: plants that crave shade and lots of moisture can bake within the course of even one day if planted in the wrong location. Most locations are a combination of sun and shade, so it is important to determine, not only total hours of direct sunlight, but whether that light hits the container morning or afternoon. Afternoon sun is always hotter, especially in August. This may sound like a lot of effort but, remember, these are living things and each have special requirements, likes and dislikes, just like us.

Next, choose your containers: they can be almost anything you can come up with (I've even seen old boots stuffed with annuals!), but it is important to remember that plants need adequate root space and drainage to prevent root rot and other disease. Plastic containers, if you can find attractive ones with drainage holes, will dry out more slowly than terracotta ones. Although less esthetically appealing, these are a better choice if you tend to sometimes forget to water your plants. Container gardens are more owner-dependent than other types as they contain a finite amount of soil, and when the containers become parched, plants can wither very quickly. Roots can't escape to seek moisture elsewhere, so never underestimate how much water containers will need.

You will always be surprised!

Adding a slow release fertilizer to the potting soil when planting containers is generally sufficient, although you can always add some water-soluble food during the course of the summer for heavy feeders. (Ask the nursery staff about feeding habits if you are unsure - overfeeding can cause lush foliage and less blooms in some plant varieties.)

Now comes the fun part. Annuals and tender perennials (which are grown as annuals in northern climates) are the most common container plants and the ones which we will focus on here. They are easy to care for and fast to perform during our moderately long growing season. At the nursery, do a walk-through to see what's available and which plants look most healthy. Find a cart, and start assembling plants based on color and size (read labels! Plants grow!). The tried and true formula

Gardening

Gardening.Com

By Susan Simm

Despite the recent Dow Jones and NASDAQ tumbles, the Internet age has proven that it is here to stay. The good news is that, along with the expansion of this phenomenon, an incredible amount of information is now only a click away. So, if you still need a nudge to sign up for access to the Information Highway, here are some great gardening resources that provide answers and inspiration about everything from how to choose plant types for your location to hints on how to grow an abundance of garden-fresh vegetables without using harmful chemicals. Right at your fingertips.

www.gardening.about.com - "He bought a house. It came with a garden. How convenient!" is a typical discussion you will find on this comprehensive and entertaining sight. With all the links provided, you could spend hours reading and researching everything you ever wanted to know about gardening. Currently "In the Spotlight": "Saving Your Little Hunk of Earth" deals with composting, natural alternatives to chemicals, encouraging wildlife and native plants and practicing conservation; "5 Blatant Design Blunders" and how to avoid them offers advice for the novice gardener and "About Spring Gardening" deals with breaking dormancy, mulching, fertilizing and pruning. There are also dozens of digital photos of flowers, foliage and gardens, free for the taking.

www.garden.org - Searching for something really different for your Hamptons garden? How about ornamental sweet potatoes! This site provides articles about such diverse subjects as re-blooming irises, gardening for butterflies, how to buy and plant trees and, yes, growing ornamental sweet potatoes. There is a great link here, called National Gardening, which allows you to select your geographic region and receive advice specific for your location and climate.

www.gardenguides.com - Tip of the Week: Skunk Control. Sounds like irrelevant advice to us here on Long Island until we learn that skunks love to eat lawn grubs and we all know what those are (or at least what damage they do to our lawns - patchy brown spots are most common). Grubs are the larvae of Japanese and June beetles, garden pests that are notoriously difficult to control. Here you will find suggestions for treating your lawn organically (with milky spore disease - harmless to humans and animals despite its lethal sounding name) as well as helpful articles about pinching back plants, weeding and cultivating and discouraging cats from your garden. You will also find links for "Herbs" (101 that heal), "Vegetables" (how to combat pests and disease) and "In the Kitchen" (100s of recipes such as black olive pesto and "best ever mashed potatoes."

www.tvorganics.com - This site, Terra Viva Organics, is dedicated to helping you grow a healthy, pesticide-free garden. It is filled with advice on fertilizers, natural pest controls, weekly tips and a monthly newsletter. You can even shop online for their products!

www.myseasons.com - An online shopping site has virtually everything. They represent such industry luminaries as Breck's, Spring Hill and The Garden Supply Company. Shop online or order catalogues. There are also links, provided by NationalGardening.com, where you pick up valuable gardening tips. Terrific book section featuring such titles as How to Grow World Class Pumpkins and Carrots Love Tomatoes, a guide to the secrets of successful companion planting. Yes, even plants have their favorite companions. For instance, do you know what happens if you plant watermelons too close to cucumbers? The watermelons will taste like cucumbers!

www.gardenmag.com - This online magazine, The Virtual Gardener, has lots of info about plant profiles, vegetable growing and feature articles dealing with issues such as water efficiency in the garden landscape. Cynthia Bain, co-author of Chicken Soup for the Gardener's Soul (a Times bestseller), has recently become a contributor and her column "Tips and Tales" is alone worth a visit to this site. She writes, "Having been born and raised on a farm, listening to the earth and understanding the seasons has always been an essential part of my life. Gardening is, to me, the same as life itself."

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Promoting Well-Being

"Rejuvenation is putting back what you give out," said Cheryl Hartsough, the new director of the International Health and Beauty Spa at Gurney's. The decision to come to Montauk is her way of practicing what she preaches. "We all need to develop healthier habits and to make a conscious effort." So after over twenty years of setting up and running spas like the Doral, the PGA National and Trump's Mar-a-Lago, Cheryl has come to direct the Gurney's facility back towards the top of the more than 3,000 spas that now exist. She also has returned because of the beauty of Montauk. "You learn they never set up a spa in an ugly place. A resort like Gurney's is on the ocean and the natural air is so healthy. You're hungrier. It nourishing.

"I love the beach. I was raised in Philadelphia and went to Ocean City and Asbury Park every summer in the 1970s. I use to be a water skier, pre-kids." The move into her new position is one planned out concerning both her career and her entire family. "My step daughters are in Cape Cod. My five year old just started kindergarten and the schools here are wonderful. She seems to like it. I wanted to take a position close to her father and my other daughters. A few ferry rides and we're there.

"Gurney's was always a major competitor in the spa business," said Cheryl, returning to the business side of her life, "now with the renovations and investment they are making bringing in a veteran spa director, we will be back on the map. This is the most European spa I've ever worked with, both in services and service providers.

"We are all baby boomers who don't want to age. The skin is an organ. Since we were all once from the sea, sea products are wonderful. On the cellular level we need to detoxify and exfoliate. We need to promote well being and self preservation. But we all learn through experience and must have a balance and some fun."

Cheryl has grown along each career path she has taken. She has written five cookbooks, each associated with the spa she was working with. "The Gurney's Spa cookbook is on the way. I put in a vegan line wherever I work. It's important to have a take home program for our guest." During her Florida years she had a TV

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

The following appeared in American Farm Bureau's Farm Bureau News publication on April 16, 2001. Thought I'd pass it along to you.

The House, Senate and President Bush have each prepared their own versions of the fiscal 2002 budget. When lawmakers return from spring recess, they will negotiate a single budget resolution. Throughout the process, Bush will try to rally support for his $1.96 trillion spending plan and $1.6 trillion tax cut. However, Congress' final budget resolution is not subject to Bush's approval.

The House on March 28 approved a $1.9 trillion budget for 2002, closely mirroring Bush's early budget outline.

The budget resolution designates agriculture's funding needs for the 10-year budget baseline as "guaranteed priority," but does not set a specific amount for the emergency assistance that will be needed this year. The House budget instead will provide farmers access to part of a 10-year, $514 billion strategic reserve fund shared with national defense. Current farm assistance requirements would be met with 2001 budget surplus funds, estimated at $90 billion.

While Bush and top House Republicans contend that surplus and reserve funds will provide sufficient assistance for farmers, Senate Republicans and Democrats took a different approach. In addition to increasing the agriculture baseline by $58.8 billion over 10 years, the Senate budget resolution included an amendment negotiated by Sens. Chuck Grassley (R-Iowa) and Blanche Lincoln (D-Ark) to provide $9 billion in retroactive emergency funding for 2001. That amount meets the target requested by Farm Bureau to meet farmers' need this year. American Farm Bureau Federation President Bob Stallman recently told the House Agriculture Committee that "Congress should approve $9 billion in emergency assistance for fiscal 2001 as soon as possible." Stallman also urged lawmakers to increase the agriculture baseline by $12 billion per

POLICE BLOTTER

On Shore Road in East Hampton, a homeowner discovered that a piece of glass had been cut out of the front door in an attempt to gain entrance to the house. The police report says, "No one was at home at the time except for two dogs, who might have scared the perps away." And you thought the law really didn't use words like that.

In what may be the first public urination arrest of the season, police in Southampton charged a seventeen year old with the aforementioned act in the parking lot of, where else, the 7-Eleven on North Sea Road.

Southampton Town Police responded to a call from Cornell University Duck Laboratory where about 250 ducklings had been stolen. The police also found several barns spray-painted on the property, "with statements attributing the incident to 'ALF,'" read the police report. ALF stands for the Animal Liberation Front.

A Sag Harbor resident told police that after an absence of some days, she had returned to her house to find someone had been using the beds on the second floor, used up all the wood for the fireplace, and put dirty dishes in the dishwasher. Ten bottles of wine and liquor, a case of beer, several TV dinners and $300 in cash were missing. However, a twelve pack of Coke had been left in the refrigerator.

And the post office in East Hampton discovered beverages left after some miscreants had passed through. In an apparent attempted burglary, the handle of the front door of the building had been pried off, but the would-be burglars left without getting in – left two cans of beer by the door. Hey, let's do a burglary. You bring the beer.

NO CAMPING, and we mean it. A limousine driver had the misfortune of being discovered sleeping in his limo in the parking lot of the Maidstone Arms. When someone called the East Hampton Village Police they did not just tell the weary driver to move on. He was charged with camping in a no camping zone. The gentleman's bad luck did not end there, however. Officers found the registration of the limo had been suspended. They took the plates from the car and the poor tired driver had to walk home.

of placing a tall fellow in the center with shorter plants around always works, but don't hesitate to be adventurous here, experimenting with asymmetrical designs. Just remember to keep in mind the final height that will be reached by the plant over the course of the summer.

Also important, while you're reading those labels for sun/shade requirements and height, are bloom times. Annuals with long bloom times will give you continuous color throughout the summer. This is why most people replace the pansies they put out in April, when we are all starved for any sign of spring, with summer-flowering annuals. Pansies love cool weather but will often get 'leggy' (tall and spindly) and cease flowering as the temperature rises.

Once your plants are in the soil and have settled in (they go through a short period of shock after transplanting), 'deadhead' (removal of faded blossoms) regularly to encourage blooming. This is actually a pruning process and will also encourage lateral, as opposed to vertical, growth.

Often overlooked, non-flowering foliage plants can make spectacular container gardens. They come in a wide range of colors, such as coleus and copperleaf, suitable to partly sunny locations. Lush greens, however, such as English ivy and ferns, demand shade.

Once a little effort has been taken, your container gardens will be limited only by your imagination.

year to ensure that farmers' diverse needs are met as Congress considers a new farm policy to replace the 1996 farm bill when it expires. The Senate budget resolution, passed April 6, also trimmed Bush's tax package from $1.6 trillion to $1.2 trillion and adds billions in spending.

After the House and Senate adjourned for spring recess, President Bush on April 9 introduced a more detailed version of the budget blueprint he released in February. The president's budget will be used as an outline for lawmakers when Congress works on the 13 yearly federal appropriations bills. Bush's budget calls for reductions in 10 of the 25 major federal agencies, with the Agriculture and Transportation departments targeted for the biggest cuts. Bush proposed $17.9 billion for USDA spending, compared to $19.4 billion for 2001.

Last year's funding included $800 million in disaster assistance. The administration predicts rising commodity prices for the next fiscal year. "Farm conditions are improving," the budget proposal states. "While supplies of farm commodities continued to exceed demand, some prices have started to recover from the lows of the past two years. Farmers are expected to earn slightly more from 2001 crop sales due to a larger harvest and improving prices. Livestock prices in 2000 recovered from previous lows, and livestock receipts exceeded the record level of $96.5 billion in 1997. Crop and livestock prices are expected to strengthen modestly in 2001."

The Bush proposal praises the 1996 farm bill for separating government income support from growers' planting decisions, but acknowledges "emergency" assistance from Congress over the past three years has kept net farm income at "above average" levels. Bush's spending allotment for USDA includes a significant increase in funding to reinforce U.S. barriers to foreign animal diseases by hiring 350 additional port inspectors at a projected cost of over $32 million. Officials said $13.5 million will be spent immediately and another $18.6 million will be spent in the next fiscal year. The 11 percent increase in animal inspection staff includes an additional 127 inspectors and technicians, 27 dog teams, 20 veterinarians and 173 temporary inspectors this year. In 2002, eight more dog teams would be hired and 80 of the temporary inspectors would become permanent hires. Congress returns to session on April 23.

show on a local NBC affiliate. It was called NBC Cooking Lite. Using her graduate level experience in Exercise Science, she has worked training camps for the Pirates, Phillies, Dolphins and the Italian Olympic Team.

"The idea is to try to clean out what we've done to ourselves," Cheryl said, referring to the Oreos loving side to all of us. "I feel we all come here for some purpose. Since I was little in Philadelphia, I was a meat and potato kind of person. I still can make the best Philly Cheese Steak Sandwich. But when I was in fifth grade I was on the volleyball team and the coach was a vegetarian. That started my decision to live a life eating plant based foods, along with eggs, fish and hormone free animal. But when I'm in Florida, it's salad and sushi and up north, I want lamb."

But she thinks she has found the other secrets to living longer and better. "Try to minimize the self destructive tendencies we all have. Heal one behavior at a time. Always try to work on it yourself and to help others. I love the healing touch. The touch therapy you find in spas help you relax and reduce stress. You have to take time for yourself." Cheryl also cites the importance of those around you. "You are who you're with. Some people are toxic. Stay away from them."

"I'm getting positive feedback from everyone here," Cheryl said, beaming a smile from ear to ear. She is particularly happy about working with the Monte family. "I had lunch with Angelo Monte and he was telling stories about Normandy Beach. It's amazing how all five sons made it back. Imagine, over 80% of those who were on that beach were killed and God, all five coming back. Maybe their purpose was to build the first complete spa in New York. Gurney's stands out as the old reliable, based upon its history. They were so ahead of their time. That's why the Montes are still here."

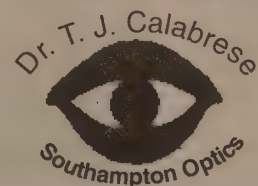

Cheryl is very new to the Montauk community. "I came here in February and started last Tuesday. I have a nice apartment overlooking the ocean but I'm looking for a house. I love the beach and here I get to keep my daughter in school and meet the new and different demands of sustaining an existing spa and helping it grow. My last place had a staff of one hundred and fifty in Western Pennsylvania. I got to teach coal miners how to massage and offer therapy. Before that I directed a staff of one hundred in Aspen. There's eighty people here, ready to meet the needs of the New York clientele and we're right in their backyard. We try to make things better and to bring it all back into a balance."

Cheryl Hartsough has found that balance in the serene hills and shoreline of Montauk and the demands and opportunities at Gurney's.
